Introduction

For the first time since its commencement in 1997, the Play the Game conference was held outside of Europe. For Play the Game as an initiative and an institution, we were anxious to see if our conference could be transplanted into a North American sports context. It was therefore very satisfying to welcome 320 participants and guests attending this year's conference.

The timing, location and conference theme: 'Athlete power on the rise', was inspired by the fact that the United States in recent years has been centre stage for athletes raising their voices with the most known examples probably being Colin Kaepernick and Megan Rapinoe. It was also U.S. athletes who revealed horrendous sexual abuse scandals within the world of sport.

The conference once again showed how international sport continues to face a number of serious challenges ranging from human rights issues related to mega-events to the ongoing systemic doping scandals and widespread corruption in sport. Moreover, by going to the U.S., the conference could better highlight the problems in college sport.

The conference addressed a broad number of important topics in sport today due to the variety and quality of the 174 presentations. The contributions by the 157 speakers - from top decision-makers to the most knowledgeable experts in sport - ensured interesting debates, new insights and new knowledge from the first to the last day of the conference.

This is not only seen through the lens of the organisers, but also the 96% of the participants, who declared that their overall impression of Play the Game 2019 is 'very good' (66%) or 'good' (30%).

In short, Play the Game 2019 did reach a volume and an impact that match the considerable resources spent by donors, organisers and participants.

Contributions from donors and partners were received with much appreciation and we are thankful for every single one. Thanks to efficient fundraising by the University of Colorado Colorado Springs (UCCS) a total of 130,000 USD were raised in the early stages of planning.

We owe our sincere thanks to the UCCS for its generous support and excellent cooperation.

The following is an internal evaluation and does not claim to present a completely objective picture of Play the Game 2019. It is an attempt to collect reactions from the participants and speakers, summarise experiences, and collect lessons learned with the purpose of creating better conferences in the future.

We shall do our best to support our reflections with evidence, and we hope you will find the reading interesting.

We have made the following overall observations:

- There was a record 40% women among the 320 participants. After the conference in 2017, where only 28% of the participants were women, we hoped to see some improvement in the gender distribution of the attendees in 2019, so this is a positive result. Another positive development was that 35% of the 157 speakers were women. Previous experiences indicate that making gender issues a central theme in itself can bring about a better gender balance at the conference, but the organisers will rather continue to work on engaging women in a wider range of topics of relevance to the conference themes.
- The overwhelmingly positive feedback through individual comments from participants is consolidated by the findings in the online survey. With 66% of the participants having a 'very good' and 30% having a 'good' overall impression of the conference, it almost equalled the score from 2017 of 67% and 31%, respectively.
- Respondents were asked to what extent Play the Game gives value to their daily work. 87% of the respondents find that the conference gives value to their daily work 'to a high extent' or 'to some extent'. 86% of the respondents believe that Play the Game 2019 stimulated and qualified the public debate about world sport.
- Even though a number of international top officials took part in the conference, the organisers are aware that participation from the top ranks of the international Olympic community was weak, especially from the International Olympic Committee (IOC) and international federations. This shows on the one hand that international sports executives are reluctant to give open public debate priority in a very busy calendar, but on the other hand that it is also possible for Play the Game to do more in securing this group's participation.
- It was a great pleasure to observe the engagement from the anti-dopingenvironment with participation from for instance Director General of the Russian Anti-Doping Agency, Yuriy Ganus, CEO of the United States Anti-Doping Agency, Travis Tygart, Chairman of the board of the Institute of National Anti-Doping Organisations, Michael Ask, and CEO of NADA Germany, Andrea Gotzmann. It was unfortunate that the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) did not find it possible to send top executives for the first time in nineteen years.
- The DoubleTree by Hilton Hotel Colorado Springs worked excellently as the main conference venue and hotel, offering practical support and smooth cooperation, especially in the execution of the conference. The facilities with all rooms located on the same floor, coffee and food served right outside the rooms, and the adjacent room providing participants with good opportunities to network and talk during breaks worked perfectly for our purpose. This is supported by the survey where 95% of the respondents consider the hotel to be 'very good' or 'good'.
- In recent conferences, the geographical representation of participants has been imbalanced with a majority coming from Europe. Moving the conference to the United States tipped the imbalance another way, towards North America. If Play the Game 2021 moves back to Europe, we hope that the generally positive feedback from the participants from the U.S. will motivate them to revisit the conference.

These observations and the following report are primarily based on:

- an anonymous internet-based questionnaire with 154 respondents, which reflects a response rate of 50% (excluding employees of the Danish Institute for Sports Studies/Play the Game and volunteers with a brief stay at the conference)
- input from the Programme Committee
- individual feedback from participants and speakers during the conference and in post-conference emails
- media statistics, especially from Play the Game's Twitter account and website (www.playthegame.org).

The evaluation is written in the light of Play the Game's main purposes:

- To create awareness of the role of sport in society at a local, national and international level
- To draw a many-sided picture of sport and support the right of the individual to choose and influence his or her own daily sporting activities
- To ensure a free, independent, open and fact-based debate on the current situation and future development of sport
- To provide journalists, researchers and political leaders with both the inspiration and the tools to explore the cultural, political, social and economic aspects of sport
- To create networks across national and professional boundaries in order to meet the challenges of a globalised sports and media world.

The evaluation focuses on some key elements regarding the programme and execution of the conference. Purely organisational and technical aspects will only be touched upon if they have affected the objectives of the conference.

Economy and participation

At the moment of publishing this report, the financial accounts of Play the Game 2019 are still not completed. They will be published as an appendix to the evaluation at a later stage.

Partnerships

Without the generous support from a variety of donors, Play the Game would not be able to hold the kind of conference we know today.

After ten consecutive conferences in Europe, it has for some time been a priority for Play the Game to go overseas. This was, as mentioned, enabled by a generous donation from the University of Colorado Colorado Springs (UCCS) and a number of local partners.

The City Sponsorship of Special Events (LART), administered by the City Council of Colorado Springs, also played an important role in making it possible to organise the conference in the U.S. with its support of 25,000 USD.

It was very encouraging that also the leading Danish sports organisations and institutions chose to continue their support at the same or even higher level than in previous years, even though the conference moved outside Europe. That reflects the growing understanding in Danish sport that democratic activism is needed to raise the ethical standards of international sport.

Once again, the journalists' unions of Norway and Denmark, as well as the Association of Danish Sports Journalists, gave earmarked support to secure the participation of journalists from less privileged countries.

Below is the full list of external donations:

- Daniels Ethics Fund Initiative at UCCS: 40,000 USD
- LART (City Council of Colorado Springs): 25,000 USD
- University of Colorado Colorado Springs (UCCS): 10,000 USD
- University of Colorado Colorado Springs, Sport Management students: 10,000 USD
- Colorado University, Boulder: 10,000 USD
- Convention & Visitors Bureau: 10,000 USD
- The Sports Corp, Colorado Springs: 10,000 USD
- U.S. Anti-Doping Agency (USADA): 5,000 USD
- Partnership for Clean Competition: 5,000 USD
- El Pomar Foundation: 5,000 USD
- The National Olympic Committee and Sports Confederation of Denmark (DIF): 22,700 USD
- Team Denmark: 11,350 USD
- The Danish Football Association (DBU): 7,575 USD
- Anti Doping Danmark: 7,575 USD
- Norwegian Union of Journalists: 5,300 USD earmarked for journalist grants
- The Danish Union of Journalists: 3,800 USD earmarked for journalist grants
- Association of Danish Sports Journalists: 1,300 USD

Another and much appreciated kind of added value was rendered by 'Programme partners', who organised their own sessions and brought in speakers and participants at their own costs. These partners were the North American Society for Sport Management (NASSM), the World Players Association, and Bond University.

Number and composition of participants

It was expected that there would be a decrease in the total number of regular participants when moving the conference to the United States. The total number of 320 participants represents a 29% decrease from 2017. However, the conference in 2017 was record-setting with 450 participants. In 2015 and 2013, the total numbers were 345 and 346, respectively. In this light the organisers consider it satisfactory to attract 320 delegates for its first conference outside Europe.

The change of continent led to a very different composition of participants. More than one in four participants were academics (27%), up from 24% in 2017 and 19% in 2015. The media represented 10% of the participants, a decline from 20% in 2017 and 15% in 2015. Public authorities were only represented by 2 persons in total. 6% of the participants came from a sports body, 13% from an organisation, 7% from business, 12% were students, and the rest were either hosts or from a group defined as 'other'.

With regards to the participants' country of origin, the United States unsurprisingly made up the biggest group with 157 participants (49%). Next in line were Denmark with 33 and Canada with 18 participants. The UK and Germany then followed with 17 and 15 participants.

More than half of the participants (205) took part in the whole conference. This is an increase of 14% from 2017 and was probably motivated by the conference location. There were 70 participants who only participated one day, 24 who participated for two days and 15 who took part in the conference for three days. The duration of the participation is unknown for 6 participants.

Participant survey

Survey background

Invitations to complete an evaluation survey were e-mailed to conference participants on 21 October 2019, four days after the conference finished.

Out of 305 distributed survey invitations (Play the Game/Idan staff and volunteers were excluded) 154 valid responses were received (145 complete and 9 partial responses) which equals a response rate of 50%. This is an increase from 43% in 2017.

Out of the 145 completed responses, 41% were women and 59% were men, quite accurately reflecting the share in participation. Of the 145 respondents, 68% were first-time participants at a Play the Game conference. 31% also participated in the 2017 conference.

Many participants chose to use the open slot to give additional comments and/or suggestions. A remarkably high number provided suggestions for changes to the format of the conference sessions, which was also the case in 2017.

All these suggestions are valuable to the organisers and give inspiration to various aspects related to the planning of format of sessions, time allocations between plenary and parallel sessions, between presentations and debate etc. Selected comments and suggestions from respondents will be included below.

High level of satisfaction

In line with surveys from previous conferences, participants remain overwhelmingly positive. For the 2015 conference, 60% of the respondents rated their overall impression as 'very good' just as 67% did in 2017 - a record high number. At this year's conference, the percentage is 66%. A total of 96% answering 'very good' or 'good' confirms the impression that Play the Game delivered a very satisfactory event.

As for the conference venue (DoubleTree by Hilton Hotel Colorado Springs) the participants are generally very positive. More than half of respondents rate it as a 'very good' conference venue (58%), while 37% rate the quality of the food as 'very good'. This is a less positive evaluation compared to the 2015 conference (47%), but better than in 2017 (27%).

Thanks again for such a lovely conference, I truly enjoyed it and my team and I learnt a lot and got to meet fantastic people.

Quote from participant

Just a quick word of thanks for organising such a wonderful conference in Colorado. I learned a lot. Quote from participant Fascinating and timely presentations, and amazing people to meet.

Quote from participant

I would like to say thank you for everything, all your help and comprehension. The conference was impressive and wonderful. Was an amazing experience for a young woman like me, I learnt a lot.

Quote from participant

In my view, the 2019 visit to America was a huge success. Without exception, everyone I spoke to felt this way.

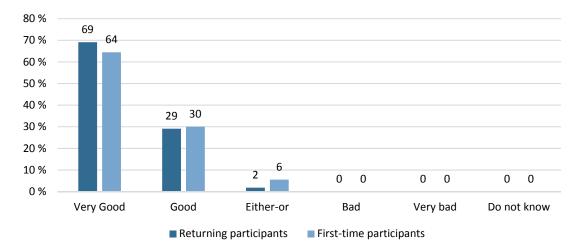

Quote from participant

Play the Game is the best conference out there and I so enjoy it. I already cannot wait until the next one.

Quote from participant

When it comes to their overall impression of the conference figure 1 below shows that respondents, who attended the Play the Game conference for the first time, and respondents, who have participated in the conference before, are almost equal in terms of rating 'Very good'- 69% and 64%, respectively.

One-day participants are less positive than participants attending two or more days of the conference which should not be surprising as they will not be able to take advantage of the opportunities for networking and having discussions with other professions to the same extent as participants staying for more days.

Figure 2: Question: "What is your overall impression?" vs. "How many days did you participate?"

Satisfaction with the conference is evenly distributed across most of the various professions represented at the conference:

87% of the respondents believe that Play the Game gives value to their daily work either 'to a high extent' (43%) or 'to some extent' (44%). In 2017, the percentages were 36% and 52%, respectively

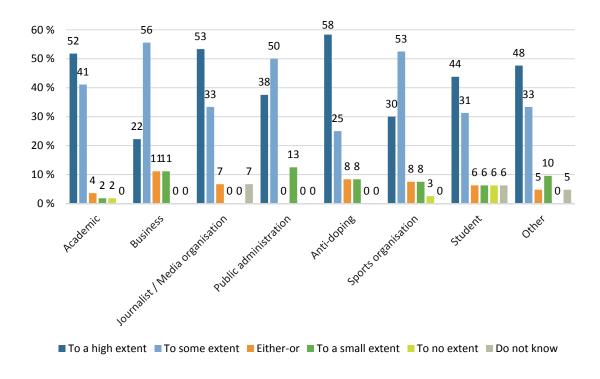

Participants who have attended Play the Game before are slightly more positive towards the value Play the Game will give their daily work:

Figure 4: Question: "To which extent do you expect Play the Game to give value to your daily work?" (First-time participants vs. returning participants)

Across professions, academics are most optimistic about the value Play the Game can give to their daily work to either 'a high extent' or to 'some extent' (93%).

I learned so much - trying to find time to follow it all up. The contacts I made were also very useful.

Quote from participant

I think PTG could - if not already - be an incubator for journalists worldwide to pool news, share, and leverage information

I teach at universities and have discussed content learned at Play the Game conferences (or even hosted guest speakers I met at the conference) in class.

It inspires!

Quote from participant

A high percentage of participants believes that the Play the Game 2019 conference succeed in facilitating networking between journalists, academics, and leaders in world sport. 76% believe it does so to a 'very high degree' or 'high degree', a small decrease from 2017 (81%).

Figure 6: Question: "To what degree did Play the Game 2019 facilitate networking between journalists, academics and sports leaders in world sport?"

Play the Game also seems to be successful in facilitating networking among other conference participants. In 2019, 76% believe that Play the Game facilitated networking to 'a very high degree' (39%) or 'a high degree' (37%).

79% of the respondents believe the Play the Game conferences is developing in a positive direction, whereas 7% of the respondents believe it is developing in a negative direction. The rest (17%) do not know if it develops in a positive or negative direction – possibly because they have not attended previous conferences.

Interestingly, a significant majority of 70% of the respondents believe the ideal frequency for Play the Game conferences is every other year. 20% believes it would be ideal to hold a Play the Game conference every year.

Programme scheduling: A mirror of the past – but with some improvement

During the conference, there was a total of 12 plenary/main sessions and 28 parallel/partner sessions. In total, 174 presentations were delivered by 157 speakers.

57% of the respondents believe the number of presentations, in general, was suitable, 7% believe it was 'much too many' and 34% 'too many'. This is a slight improvement from 2017 where opinions were split almost evenly between those who believed the number of presentations, in general, was suitable (47%) and those who believed the number was either 'much too many' or 'too many' (48%).

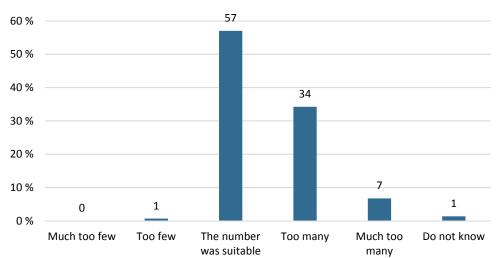

Figure 7: Question: "What do you think about the number of presentations in general?"

The mix between plenary and parallel sessions seemed satisfactory. 70% of the respondents found the balance to be 'suitables, yet a substantial proportion (23%) believe there were too many parallel sessions.

The length and general standard of presentations in main/plenary sessions also receive satisfactory ratings as 77% of respondents believe the length of presentations was 'suitable' (86% in 2017) and 92% believe the general standard of main/plenary sessions was either 'very good' or 'good' (85% in 2017).

sessions

82% also believe the length of presentations in parallel sessions was 'suitable', with 10% thinking it was 'generally too short'.

Conference themes popularity

The most popular main theme of the conference is 'sports governance', noted as the theme that was the most relevant for the participants.

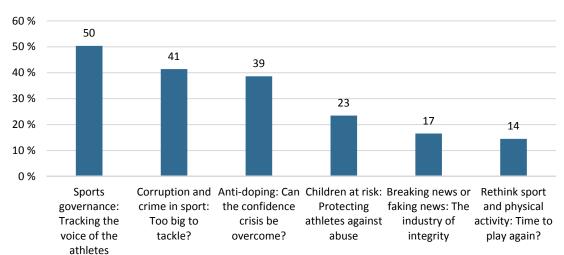

Figure 9: Question: "Please select the conference themes that had the most relevance for you (maximum three themes)"

Increased activity on website, app and social media

When a Play the Game conference is on, the activity seen in the conference rooms is also reflected on Play the Game's website, www.playthegame.org. In the month of Play the Game 2019 (30 September 2019 – 27 October 2019), the number of sessions on the website increased by 206% when comparing to the number of sessions in the same month the year before.

There was a very high increase in the number of users and page views at playthegame.org:

- 15,651 users (an increase of 177% when compared to the same month the previous year where the number was 5,646)
- 38,117 page views (an increase of more than 236% when compared to the previous year where the number was 11,349)

The following extract from Google Analytics gives a graphical representation of the difference in the use of the website during the month of the conference and during the same month one year earlier.

There are users from 174 countries coming from six continents in the conference month, and 132 countries during the conference days (13-17 October) alone. Table 1 shows the origins of the visitors to playthegame.org during the conference.

Table 1: Origin of visitors to playthegame.org (13-17 October 2019). Top 10.

Twitter

Prior to the conference, #ptg2019 was designated as the key Twitter 'hashtag' and participants were encouraged to use this when tweeting from/about the conference. Conference participants embraced the hashtag and used it often during the conference, which gave the conference "its own life on Twitter", as one of the participants said.

Play the Game's tweets during the conference month had close to 262,100 impressions - a record high. In 2017 there were 122,900 impressions.

Facebook

As a consequence of the organisation's experience with Twitter as the most active social media regarding Play the Game's activities it was decided not to focus on Facebook during this year's conference.

Conference app

Play the Game 2019 had a dedicated conference app free to download and use on mobile phones. The conference app contained the conference programme, thematic articles, information about speakers, hotels, relevant sites etc.

The app was downloaded by close to 50 % of the participants (157 times) and had 4,375 sessions during the conference.

The app also included the possibility for participants to communicate with other participants both directly and to all app-holders. The opportunities afforded by this networking tool were, however, not utilised completely, most likely owing to a lack of information about the opportunity in the lead up to the conference as well as the fact that Play the Game as organisers did not use it either. It is worth considering raising participant engagement through a conference app at the next conference by posting conference information, polls, push notifications etc.

Besides an increased activity on our own platforms, international media has written about the conference where most of the articles focus on doping related issues.

Conclusion: Important challenges remain

Without a doubt we as organisers cannot be anything but delighted about the successful hosting of our first conference outside Europe. The great enthusiasm from the participants and the atmosphere surrounding the conference gives Play the Game great hope and expectation for future conferences.

In spite of the positive outcome and the positive feedback we have received, we can also once again - note that there are still some challenges ahead for the Play the Game conference, and in general they seem to be recurring.

To sum it all up, the conclusions are similar to the last two editions of the Play the Game conference:

- To continuously adapt the conference content and composition to a rapidly changing sports political landscape in order to ensure that Play the Game can still add a particular value to the international public debate and policy making
- To further extend the participation from regions outside Europe, especially from Africa, Asia, and Latin America
- To continue to consider hosts outside Denmark, and to explore opportunities for complementing conference activities abroad - for instance shorter, more regional or thematically less comprehensive conferences
- To decide on the conference dates and venue 18 months in advance
- To keep trying to increase the ratio of female speakers and participants
- To increase the number of paying participants
- To increase the participation of decision makers and top executives from international sports bodies
- To better prepare global media coverage by motivating international media companies more actively through personal contact
- To work with new conference formats
- To generate a more sustainable economy by strengthening the basic funding of Play the Game's office

With these words, we would like to extend our sincere thanks to our participants, our partners, our sponsors, and to everybody who gave a helping hand in making Play the Game 2019 relevant and successful.
